BRAIN JUNK TRIVIA - Chances are you have been teased before about being a "know-it-all." You're probably the person in the group who does know the answers more than most. And that's a good thing. Having an oversized curiosity leads to having an excellent brain stuffed with all sorts of information. While apes and humans are primates, humans sometimes choke on drink or food but apes do not.

Have you ever been curious as to what those large dark patches, on the Antarctic snow, as seen from the space station? There have been large colonies of penguins in Antarctica for thousands and thousands of years. Penguins poop and, with constant freezing temperatures, poop builds up to a point it can be seen from space.

The most common emergency number in the world is "112." About 50 countries use that number.

Everyone needs to learn a little more, and you probably agree. The chitchat around the water cooler becomes more interesting, and conversations with friends and family do too.

The country of Tajikistan cancels the citizenship of anyone out of the country more than five years. (Meaning if a person goes out of the country to visit relatives or work in another country and stays longer than five years – whoops! They are without a homeland.)

When the iPhone 6 came out, groups of Chinese folks spent long hours in long lines in front of U.S. Apple stores to must as many as they could because they could be resold in China for $4,000 each.

Incredibly, the world's record for eating a whole 12-inch diameter pizza is 41 seconds.

Even if you've never read a trivia book before you will surely enjoy the hundreds and hundreds of pieces of trivia in BRAIN JUNK TRIVIA – for the variety of interesting facts and humor it contains.

You can look in Chapter 5 if you want to know what Elvis Presley did to his bedroom slippers.

Have you ever had a curiosity as to what happens to the old wooden barrels used to age Jack Daniel's whiskey? Look in Chapter 6 and you will be surprised at the answer. (By the way – "it's hot.")

Look in Chapter 7 to find out what was recreated by scientists using the DNA from relatives of Vincent Van Gogh – and is on display in a German museum. (This one is just a bit creepy.)
