HUMOUR IS A FUNNY THING...except sometimes it isn't. It was my frustration with listening to bad, unfunny jokes that prompted me to start collecting jokes that made me and my family laugh.

I was brought up with and laughed at Monty Python and The Goodies during my teens. I then enjoyed decades more humour, mirth and endless jokes thanks to BBC Radio 4: Just A Minute, I'm Sorry I Haven't A Clue and The News Quiz.

After more than two decades of puzzling over the punchline with one particular joke (the weekly game of "Mornington Crescent" on I'm Sorry I Haven't A Clue), I eventually worked it out. It was so funny it was worth waiting 20 years to understand (I can explain the joke to anybody who emails me and makes a sufficiently worthwhile offer).

But as I have grown older, I have become increasingly impatient with un-funny jokes. Jokes where the humour is solely based upon saying swear or obscene words or ridiculing people. Jokes where comedians betray, knowingly or otherwise, their dislike of, or hatred towards, a particular group of people.

I was so fed up with comedians whom I found embarrassing and jokes which did not make me laugh that I began looking for jokes which I found funny. I discovered that old jokes were the best, although there is a place for good, new ones.

I collected the best jokes – by which I mean the ones that made me and my family laugh. I found that I liked short, witty jokes and old-fashioned one-liners.

I tested my favourite jokes by reading them after dinner to my family. If there was no laughter—in the bin they went. But my family soon got fed up with that so I binned the unsuccessful jokes instead.

And here they are, just for you, dear reader. My very first collection of jokes!
